CarMax sells cars with high and low mileage of all shapes and sizes. Since all of these vehicles are used, you should consider an extended maintenance plan, also known as an extended car warranty, which can protect drivers from the cost of costly repairs as the car continues to age and accrue miles. Extended warranties can be purchased from a number of suppliers, including CarMax. MaxCare®, the official CarMax warranty, offers an extended service plan program with several options that can be purchased with any CarMax car. But what does it cover? Is it worth the investment? How long does the coverage last? Here's a look at MaxCare and why we think it's best to choose an extended service plan from another provider. In this article: What we think of MaxCare If you are going to purchase an advanced service plan for your CarMax car, it may seem easy to buy MaxCare on the spot. The coverage is pretty standard, but the details are hard to find online. We recommend asking a lot of questions and getting a sample of the contract before making a decision. CarMax Limited CarMax Guarantee usually sells used cars that range from one to eleven years old, meaning about half of the vehicles will no longer be covered by the manufacturer's warranty. All cars sold by CarMax have a limited warranty at no extra cost. According to CarMax, its limited warranty lasts 90 days or 4,000 miles and covers all the important systems of your car and hundreds of parts inside and day. Details of the CarMax warranty are not available on the company's website, so you need to contact your local CarMax to fully understand what it does and doesn't cover. No matter how well the CarMax warranty protects your car, the duration is only 90 days, which is only a small fraction of the time you probably own a car. That's why CarMax offers MaxCare, an extended service plan program. CarMax Advanced Service Plan: MaxCare Regarding the beginning of the car purchase process at CarMax, you will probably be presented with the opportunity to purchase a MaxCare Extended Service Plan. Added protection is an attractive option, especially since CarMax buyers leave a lot with a used car, and some may have chosen a less reliable, more affordable model in an attempt to save money. Before a CarMax representative offers you a MaxCare service plan, it's important to know the facts. Understanding MaxCare plans can keep you from being swayed by a CarMax representative who's just trying to make a sale. Here's what you should know: Coverage Details Covered System Parts MaxCare Covers includes engine, transmission, transmission, electronics, electrical systems, steering, suspension, cooling system, and MaxCare Cost of your MaxCare service plan cost can be added to the amount you fund, so you pay for it over time (with interest), or it can be paid in full before the deduction each time Bring your car for repairs, you will pay a consistent deductible for the visit. The lowest possible deductible is $50. In most states, this deductible is reduced to $0 if you have a car charred in a CarMax or certified RepairPal facility. When you can buy MaxCare only when you buy a CarMax car. The vehicle can still be under its factory warranty. Transfer coverage to MaxCare is a transfer if you sell your car, but the restrictions apply. Roadside assistance MaxCare includes 24/7 emergency assistance on the side of the road up to $100 per occurrence. However, replacement elements are not included. For example, if you have a flat wheel or run out of gas, you pay for replacement tires or fuel. CarMax refund rentals will cover your rental car up to $40 per day for 7 days while it is in the repair shop. You can use MaxCare at any ASE-certified facility. Direct payment to MaxCare will pay for the repair of the facility directly. We recommend requesting a contract sample before purchasing an extended MaxCare service plan. So you can read about covering yourself and ask questions as needed. Unlike car pricing systems, the cost of the MaxCare plan and the length of the term are not disclosed online. It is important to note that MaxCare is sold by CarMax, but is contracted by independent third-party service plan administrators. This means that CarMax dealerships are not responsible for any issues or issues you have throughout the life of the service plan. Here's an example of what the MaxCare Extended Service Plan won't cover: Regular maintenance services like oil changes and settings of aftermarket accessories like GPS, radar detectors and radios servicing parts such as batteries, air conditioner refrigerant, engine refrigerant, Drive belts, brake pads and footwear modifications outside those made by the manufacturer or its representative Repair made to meet the state standards of emissions Damage from collision damage from negligence or improper suspension work, tires, wheels, catalytic converter, manual picture gearbox, bumpers, alignment body parts CarMax Company has over 200 stores across the country, making it the largest seller of used cars in the country, and it is known for its hassle. While car buying blogs often encourage buyers to negotiate the price of a car, all CarMax prices are non-negotiable. The price you see listed on the vehicle is exactly the price you will pay. Not to mention that all CarMax sellers pay on a fixed commission basis, so they have no incentive to influence you anyway regarding the model or model of the car that you are considering. This simple approach tends to earn CarMax positive reviews among consumers when it comes to the buying process. One woman commented on her experience with CarMax ThePennyHoarder.com, saying: 'It was so easy. There's no stress, no pressure to try to beat the sentence. I know it wasn't everyone's experience, but I would definitely do it again. CarMax itself has an AP rating from the Better Business Bureau, but keep in mind that all its services are wrapped up in this class. Selling extended service plans is only a small part of CarMax's business. Because MaxCare's service plan is a third-party service provider, you'll be working with another customer service team using MaxCare. What are the parameters of my plan outside of MaxCare? Pros Cons Coverage for the most important systems available only when buying your CarMax car Transfer $50 deductible comes down to $0 in many states Many service center options, including RepairPal® certified repair facilities Less benefits refunds than most extended car purchase plans can be a stressful experience in itself, whether you want to buy from CarMax or another dealer but protect it with an extended service plan should not be. Before deciding on MaxCare, consider other third-party vehicle maintenance companies to make sure you are getting the best deal. During our research leading third-party providers of extended warranty, we found that there is a lot like about these vehicle maintenance contracts. For example: third-party vendors typically have at least three levels of coverage and several contract options. For example, CARCHEX and CarShield have at least 15 plans. Many third-party providers are brokers, which means they receive contracts from at least one administrator. This can reduce the cost of your contract as there is more competition between brands. You can pay for an extended warranty for several years or several months. Some companies such as CarShield offer monthly contracts. Virtually all third-party providers include roadside assistance, towing refunds, car rental reimbursement, and other perks. The trick is to compare how much they reimburse you and how many days. Most third-party companies (and MaxCare) allow any ASE-certified repair plant to be used. These can be national chains, independent shops and dealerships. So, which extended service plan is better for the company? In our study, it came down to these three best advanced car warranty providers. When buying advanced warranties, the best thing to do is to call around and get quotes tuned to your particular car. This way you can compare each company's prices and feel the customer service. Get a free quote from our top three vendors below: We rated endurance as the best overall because it scored well in all of our categories: options reliability, cost, customer service, convenience, and additional perks. CARCHEX is another reputable party to the company's expanded car warranty that has been in the industry for more than 20 years. The company offers five levels of coverage that are even more broken down on the of 21 warranty contracts. Coverage ranges from comprehensive protection, similar to manufacturer warranty, to basic transmission protection for your engine, transmission and related parts. This setup in itself makes it more flexible than the extended MaxCare service plan. We chose CARCHEX for better service because of its reputation to ensure a positive experience throughout the shopping process. We love the way CARCHEX sales departments take a customer-centric, advisory approach. Representatives will be happy to answer all your questions along with providing a quote tuned to your car. CARCHEX's reputation has also brought the company a long list of endorsements and partnerships from trusted companies in the industry, including SiriusXM, RepairPal, Kelley Blue Book, Edmunds, CARFAX and more. Here's a closer look at some of the finer details and differences between CARCHEX and MaxCare.
